Laughter remains the best medicine

A farmer named Johnny, lived alone in the countryside. He had a pet dog who was ever so faithful and intelligent. One day Johnny goes to his vicar and says "father my dog has died and I was wondering, if perhaps you could possibly say mass for the poor creature..."

The vicar immediately told the farmer: "no we can not have religious services for an animal in church... But, may I recommend that you approach the new denomination down the road... May be they do something for your pet dog...". Johnny thanked the vicar and on his way out he said "I'll go straight away to them. By the way do you think €50,000 euro is enough of a donation for the service?"

The vicar immediately responded... "But why in the name of god, did you not tell me that your dog was catholic..."
